The luxury condominiums of 2000 Ocean, a high-end residential tower in South Florida, officially hit the market.

Last night, in Miami, KAR Properties LLC, 2000 Ocean's New York-based developer, celebrated the sales launch as well as the grand opening of the innovative gallery for the beachfront high-rise, which is the sole new development north of Golden Beach.

The 5,000sq. ft. gallery showcased a 7.5-foot scale model of the residential tower and utilized virtual reality to render the opulently designed residences. Aside from exploring floor plans, fact sheets and exquisite fixtures through VIP tours, guests could also enjoy interactive virtual-space presentations of the condominiums.

The developer, Shahab Karmely, and the exclusive sales team of Douglas Elliman Development Marketing mingled among the attendees and answered questions on the forward-thinking design of 2000 Ocean. Also on hand were representatives of the Italian interior design firm, Minotti, tasked with sweeping their first stateside project in luxury, as well as the renowned architect of the 38-story tower, Enrique Norten, of TEN Arquitectos.

By 2020, when 2000 Ocean is slated for completion, the 64 residences will be furniture-ready yet personalized thanks to Minotti SpA's curated services. The all-stone kitchens and bathrooms will be custom-designed by Minotticucine.

"We are thrilled to share our vision of what we believe is a unique synthesis of style, luxury and the ultimate in resort-style living," said Karmely during the event. "2000 Ocean is setting the standard for future developments and will offer an unparalleled quality of life for residents while enhancing the Atlantic Coastline."

Ranging from three to six bedrooms, the residences boast price tags that start at $2.8 million. These high-end homes come with a glut of amenities, including biometric access to private elevator landings, two swimming pools, a spa, a Hammam ice room and an art gallery among other perks.
